Maddie's shoulders sank. She really wanted to play on that, but it was her first day in a new school, and she didn't want to cause trouble.

Ella stared at the play set with a wavy slide, wobbly bridge, and tall tower. "I went on it once. It was over the summer, and none of the fourth graders were here to kick me off. It was amazing."

Maddie wanted to do something to thank Ella for being so nice on Maddie's first day. Getting the fourth graders to let them on the play set was the perfect thing. "Come on. We're going on it." Before Ella could protest, Maddie grabbed her arm and pulled her over to it.

"Hey, what do you think you're doing?" a boy asked from the inside the tower. "Fourth graders only. Go play on the swings or something."

"No, I think we'll play here," Maddie said.

"You can't just come on here," the boy insisted.

"Sure we can. This playground is for everyone."

"You must be new, so I'll explain the rules to you," he said. "Fourth graders play here. The rest of the school can play on anything else."

Maddie looked around. "Anyone else want to play on the big play set?" Just about everyone turned and looked at her. "Come on. Let's challenge these guys in whatever game they're playing." Maddie knew the boy couldn't turn her down, and the other kids jumped at the chance to use the play set.

"I bet third graders can make it up to the tower before the fourth

"You guys either," Maddie said.

"Same time tomorrow?"

"Yeah," the boy said. "I'm Scott."

"I'm Maddie, and this is Ella.

See you tomorrow. And I want a rematch on the race to the tower."

"You got it," Scott said.
