Lena followed Jennifer and Tara off the bus, listening to them discuss their plans to go bowling this weekend. They waved and quickly turned to say goodbye to Lena before they got into their cars.

"What's wrong, sweetie?" Lena's mom asked as she got in the car. "Did something happen at school today?"

"No. It's just that Tara and Jennifer made plans to go bowling tomorrow and they didn't invite me."

"Oh." Her mom nodded. "Did you ask them if you could go too?"

"No. I couldn't invite myself. If they wanted me to go, they would've asked."

"Well, maybe they want to spend some time together, just the two of them."

Lena stared out the window. "But I didn't do anything to make them mad. Why would they leave me out?"

"I don't think that's what's going on. Sometimes a group of three doesn't always work. Sometimes one person is left out."

"I just don't

Lena spent the rest of the day thinking about going bowling. The next day, she called her mom.

"Mom, can I go bowling with you and Dad?"

"You want to go bowling with me?"

"Well, yeah. Since Dad has to work this weekend and we aren't going to the baseball game, I thought we could go bowling."

Her mom raised an eyebrow. "Or were you thinking we could spy on Jennifer and Tara?"

"I don't even know when they're going. They might not be there. But ever since I heard they were going bowling, I've wanted to go. It's been a while."

"Okay," her mom said.

An hour later they were renting shoes.

"Look there's Jennifer and Tara," Lena said, pointing two lanes over.

"Why don't you go say hi?" her mom asked.

"I don't want them to think I followed them here. Let's just play."

Lena picked a ball and took her first shot. She knocked down nine pins. She carefully lined up her second shot. The last pin fell, giving her a spare.

"Great job!" Jennifer said, coming up behind her.

"Of course," Tara said.

"My dad had to work today, so Mom and I decided to come here."

"Well since you're here, can we bowl together?" Jennifer asked.

"Absolutely," Lena said.
